specializing in success

In a complex and ever-evolving world of care, having a registered nurse with specialized advanced training can completely change the outcome of a case. ANS Solutions has a constantly growing network of certified nurse experts who bring unmatched clinical, jurisdictional, and collaborative negotiation expertise to each case. That network spans all U.S. jurisdictions, with nurses in all 50 states—because having a deep knowledge of local nuances can be the difference that turns your desired outcome into the one you achieve.

Litigation and medical class-action support

With highly specialized skill sets, our nurse experts often play a crucial role in providing litigation and medical class-action support.

Our nurse experts' extensive knowledge of both the legal and medical aspects positions them as an excellent resource, both behind-the-scenes and in court. Our nurse experts can:

- Organize and summarize medical records into cohesive, concise reports
- Clarify causation issues, assess the extent of the damage/injury, and determine contributing factors
- Assist with depositions and trial preparation
- Provide expert opinion or testimony

We've also created a dedicated team with an average of 25 years of experience who specifically focus on class-action support, including:

- Initial screening for merit and damages
- Data analysis to provide a quick and accurate case snapshot
- Recommendation for appropriate next steps

Life care planning

ANS can help with life care planning in two ways: our nurse experts can either create a stand-alone, comprehensive Life Care Plan (LCP) or they can evaluate the merit of an existing plan that is being questioned.

In either case, we'll provide an individualized, objective, and highly accurate report that provides a detailed case overview—which often resolves disputed issues before even going to trial. When trial is necessary, you can rest assured that the litigation-tested LCP will withstand scrutiny.

Medical record review

Before we can help improve the future of a patient's care, it's important to understand their medical history. So we offer an in-depth medical record review as part of our end-to-end case services.

This kind of detailed review presents a unique opportunity to identify issues—including gaps in treatment, high-risk patient behavior, deviations in standard of care, as well as opportunities to impact pharmaceutical regimens. With a big-picture view, we can implement changes to create a cost effective and quality treatment plan.

The reports can be customized to meet the specific case needs. For example, we can incorporate deposition preparation questions for health care providers. We can also include information to help claims professionals evaluate, negotiate, and settle a file.

Home health and facility evaluations

A home health evaluation can help ensure a patient receives the right level of care within their residence. Each evaluation takes into account their needs, functional ability, and residential environment. Then a personalized recommendation is created based on the nurse's experience in home care standards and local jurisdiction.

Similarly, a facility evaluation can be used to identify the appropriate facility for the patient's specific condition, taking into account their age, social abilities, and clinical needs. Facility evaluations can also be used to monitor ongoing care within the facility and can identify future needs and concerns as the patient ages or as their condition progresses.
